Before you complete this form, please read the following important information.

The super fund's Trustee is bound by Federal law as to whom payment can be made should you die. The Trustee is obliged to pay your benefits to your dependants* if you have any, and/or to any persons with whom you shared an interdependent relationship*or your legal personal representative. The Trustee does not have to follow your instructions and has the final say as to who will receive the proceeds of your super and insurance.

* A dependant includes your spouse (including de facto of either sex), children, or any person with whom you share an interdependent relationship. An interdependent relationship is a relationship with a person of either sex with whom you share a close personal relationship, you live together and one or both parties provide financial and domestic and personal support of the other. You may have an interdependent relationship if you have a close personal relationship but are unable to meet the other requirements because one or both of you suffer from a physical, intellectual or psychiatric disability. Your legal personal representative is usually the executor of your Will, and is someone you trust to manage your financial affairs when you are not able to do so.
